"It would seem that the whole household is up betimes, that the young people breakfist at eight and dine at one, which hours some people think decidedly vulgar. During the forencon they keep to their books. Then the boys are dulled in military exercises, while the guils, we suppose, practice enfetthence. After this they have an hour of music and dancing. By this time dinner is ready, and when its boils are said mounted the children go to the riding school, from which they proceed, the princes to a carpenter a shop, were they handler, and saw and turn, till they are treed, after which they occasionally spond some time in a laboratory fitted up for their peculiar use. The school is now ended, and while the girls go out to play or inde, the boys go out to walk, pity, ride, or shoot, till ten time—Then comes the preparation for the lesson to morrow, and then to bed. Such, according to the Finglish papers, is the daily life of the Queen's children, and when we add that, morning and evening, they are trained in the truths of religion, we believe that we have before as the fact, that the list family in the empire is regulated in a fishion which it were well for a good many other furnies if they would but militate."

CELATE THE DOCUMENTS. The Young Men's Meeting Last Night. A CROWDED HOUSE!

Young's Hall was crowded last night by the Young Men of Milwankee and their friends, including many ladies. Much credit is due to the committee in charge of the matter, for the good order which prevaded.

The proceedings were such as to show that the young men who cast their first votes this fall, and those who come next after them, feel their heavts burn with the fires of patriotism -that they indignantly denounce the outrages upon Free speech in Congress—and upon Free don in Kansas, and that they mean to make their influence felt at the polls for Fremont and

CAIRO, March 14, 1856. I had intended to say something further in rerence to this delightful climate, together with few words more upon the splendid scenery that adds half the charm of travelling upon the Nile. apprehend two or three mouths spent upon the dississippi, at any wason of the year, in this ay, would be but a tame and dull affair; but ere it is glorious, enchanting, and never to be orgotten! I realized here in the clear soft atnosphere and gorgeous autrises and sunsets, al hat I had even read, dreamed or thought of in Italy. I had once a single foretaste, and only once, and that was in Greece during a residence of two weeks; but here it is every day, and I night say every hour of the day and night. Only angine one half the heavens, the West, at nearly he close of day in one mass of golden, fleed louds— the air is bland, not a sigh is Leard, even mong the palms that gracefully stand on the shore low there is a change—the sun has sank in the esert-the burnished gold is changed-a hectic blush streams in flashes across the horizon, and n a few moments the whole west, from north to sets is produced by the reflection of the sun's ays upon the sands of the Lybian desert, which, n that section of country where they strike, are nore red than in any other place.

But the evenings are hardly less beautiful The air being so transparent, the stars appear as f magnified in size, increased in number and drawn nearer. They look more like builliant diamonds, hung in some vaulted room resplendent with light; and the moon almost perpendicmarly over the travellers head, appears also larger and nearer, and to move in a circle independent of the earth, in an orbit blazing with liquid light. I believe that this is the united testimony of all strangers who visit the country, that there are few places, if any, where the air is more bland and healthy, or the scenery more pic. burning sand, over which the Sirocco and Khamsin are continually ranging with their heat and dust, and rivers teeming with crocodiles and hippopotami, along whose slimy banks contagior and disease ever follow, are greatly mistaken,-Aside from its antiquities and historical associ ations, the pureness of the climate and interestmg natural scenery, there is much to see and admire. The people are poor, but naturally honest. There is no incentive to labor, although nature is bountiful and restores to the husband-man fourfold what it does in other countries. I am told that the farmer can raise four crops in kee, do hereby declaic out firm adherence to the the second coming from self-sown seed forever.

Resolved, That we consider the assault on the of the first crop. But government officers, in the name of the Viceroy, under one pretence and another, take nearly all the producer raises, leaving merely enough to barely support himself and family. This is only left on the principle that the husbandman saves a portion of his grain for seed, to moduce more. Everything is taxed burning disgrace to any mation claiming to be high-even the very palm trees that nature hereivilized, and as such, shall ruceive our unqualiself has reared to shade from the burning sun, and supply with dates her poor children of the > ties, as well as districts in the interior, I am told have acquired immense wealth in what they have ground out of their poverty-stricken sublects. One day when we were going up we were for what reason is not known. passed by one of these Pashas, I think a ne phew of Said Pashs, the present Vicercy of Egypt, and grandson of Muhomet Ali. The steamboat was followed by a beautiful barge in tow, and although the day was very fine, every window was closed and the curtains closely drawn. As the whole retinue passed very near us, I thought I saw, possibly it may have been fancy, one corner of the rich embroidered silk curtains rise, and a pair of black eyes, and they were young and woman's too, look out. But it was a double barreled pistol. They arranged it so but a moment, for the boat was underfull headway. The parge was elegantly built and tustefully fitted up for the express purpose it was used-to carry the Pasha's harem. It probably would accommodate from fifty to one hundred persons. On the steamboat I saw nothing unusual. There appeared to be a number of gen tlemen, some sitting and reading, others promenading and in conversation. Probably they all belonged to the household. But on the barge everything was as silent and dumb as if it bore nothing but hearses. In contrast to this, I am reminded of a novel then called to Ranklin to shoot, who killed two palm, for the trunks, even if they would flost, fallen men, and immediately six more were seen crosses of the two, both bucks and ewes. They they could not afford to cut down, because in have also five valuable "Atwood" bucks in many instances the dates that grow upon them this flock, of which they have reason to be are their mest and bread. These they lash together somehow and get on, a dozen at a time, and work themselves across the river. We one day and upsetting the whole. I should think there were on it some ten or more of both sexes, squat down, with water nearly over the raft by the weight on it. The wardrobe of all the passengers was extremely scanty-the men having on only, The New York Times remarks:

"Jackson, and Tatlor, and Frances, are the only men whose nominations for the Presidency have been based upon personal character, and effected by a fusion of parties; and, in the case of the first two there was at the time of the case of the first two there was at the time of the case of the first two there was at the time of the case of the first two there was at the time of the case of the first two there was a the time of the case of the first two there was a the time of the case of the first two there was a the time of the case of the first two there was a the time of the case of the first two there was a the time of the case of the first two there was a the time of the case of the ca had one through both her nostrils, at least three or four inches in diameter. The more common enstom is to wear them smaller and only through one of the nostrils. I have also seen them wear not only similar rings, perhaps bracelets would be the most proper word, around the arms, but around the ankles. Of these last, minus nearly everything class, the Nubian tecture, as well as the paintings, throw a great deal of light upon the history of the times when they were executed. They were built by equaring of Kansas Committee, held on the 20th day of says:

J. C. GOODRICH, Chief Engineer. Milwarer, July 2d, 1955.

The following letter has been received by the Department from Judge Rosz, of Beaver Date:

Braver Date, June 36 b, 1888.

J. C. Goonatcu, Esq., Chief Engineer of Fire Departmen Milwaukee.

Dear Sir: —We have just learned that there has been as informality in the manner of presenting an invitat the Fire Department (over which you preside) to the fetivities of our Fourth July Railroad Celebration. I bug to ascure you, that such informality has been wholly the result of want of experience in such matters, in the Fire Company of our young city, having buly instermenced, and not yet completed their organisation. I trust you will present the compliments of our Committee of Arrangements, in behalf of our cit-zens, to those connected with your Department, and assure them that nothing can afford us more pleasure Arrangements have been completed for a free enter-tainment and excursion for all who will grant as the favor and pleasure of their presence. than their presence on that occasion.

Very respectfully yours, S. L. HOSE, Prest of the Day.
